

More Cuban Migrants Arrive in Mexico from Costa Rica

San José, February 10 (RHC)-- Direct flights from Costa Rica to Mexico continued on Wednesday, transferring new groups of Cuban migrants, who are stranded in Central America after leaving Cuba legally to try to reach the U.S., lured by Washington's arbitrary migration policy towards Cuba.

Local media reported that in the early morning hours on Wednesday a new group of 120 people boarded a Global Air flight bound for Nuevo Laredo, in the Mexican state of Tamaulipas.

Costa Rican authorities have programmed a second direct flight also on Wednesday, while on Thursday, another group of Cuban migrants will be flown to El Salvador, from where they will be transferred by bus to Guatemala and then, to Mexico.

Costa Rican authorities have planned the transfer of a total of 564 Cuban migrants to Mexico in just two days.
