

French Minister Calls on Citizens to Become Reservists

Paris, July 18 (RHC)-- French Interior Minister Bernard Cazeneuve urged French civilians Saturday to join the military reserves to help the country tackle a wave of terrorist attacks that have befallen France in recent months.

His call comes after many French citizens have criticized the government for not doing more to protect innocent bystanders. Meanwhile, French President Francois Hollande said Friday that reservists would be called upon to boost the ranks of police and gendarmes.

The operational reserve is currently made up of 12,000 volunteers, 9,000 of whom are within the paramilitary police and 3,000 in the regular police force, said Cazeneuve. He said the number of security forces deployed to protect the population was nearly 100,000, including 53,000 police, 36,000 paramilitary police and 10,000 soldiers.
