

Donald Trump denies massive protests in UK during official visit

London, June 6 (RHC)-- In Britain, during a joint press conference with Prime Minister Theresa May Tuesday, Trump laid out plans for a post-Brexit trade deal, saying that the U.S. should have access to all sectors of the British economy, including the National Health Service -- although he later walked back his comments about the NHS in an interview with Piers Morgan.

Massive anti-Trump protests have rocked London since Trump's arrival. The U.S. president surprised reporters when he said that the protesters formed "a very small group of people, so it was fake news." Tens of thousands of people are estimated to have taken to the streets.
