

Volcanic eruption in Philippines forces residents to evacuate homes

Manila, January 14 (RHC)-- In the Philippines, authorities are urging nearly half a million people near the capital Manila to evacuate their homes, after the Taal volcano spewed ash into the air Sunday. Authorities are now warning about a possible “explosive eruption” or volcanic tsunami. The Taal volcano is one of the world’s most dangerous volcanoes.

Meanwhile, in Puerto Rico, strong aftershock have been shaking the Caribbean island since last Tuesday. There have been powerful tremors almost daily after a 6.4 magnitude earthquake struck Puerto Rico last week, knocking out power.
