

Brazilians demand Bolsonaro's removal with a wave of protests

Brasilia, March 18 (RHC)-- Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro have been hit by a wave of pot-bangings in their main neighborhoods to demand the removal of Brazilian President Jair Bolsonaro. "Bolsonaro out," shouted hundreds of people from their windows and balconies as they were hitting their pots and pans.

The call for the pot-banging came from the social networks, and they were the prelude to the demonstration scheduled for Wednesday against the ultra-right-wing president, which could be postponed due to the COVID-19. The protests took place a few hours after the country registered its first two deaths from the coronavirus, amid the global crisis that this pandemic has generated.

This Tuesday, the congressman from the Sustainability Network party, Leandro Grass, presented before Congress the tenth request of impeachment against the president, for crimes of responsibility that threaten the constitution and the security of the country.
