

New Jersey nursing home on lockdown after COVID-19 outbreak kills eight people

Newark, March 31 (RHC)-- In New Jersey, a nursing home in Wanaque is on lockdown after a COVID-19 outbreak killed at least eight people and infected many others.

Last week, nearly 100 residents at a nursing home in Woodbridge, New Jersey, were evacuated from the facility after two dozen people tested positive for the coronavirus -- and all residents were presumed to be infected.

Clusters of coronavirus cases have been observed at nursing homes around the country, including in Maryland, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.
