

Johnson & Johnson ordered to pay $2.1 billion for cancer-causing baby powder

New York, June 25 (RHC)-- Johnson & Johnson has been ordered to pay $2.1 billion to a group of women who developed ovarian cancer after using talcum products contaminated with asbestos.

In its ruling, the Eastern District Missouri Court of Appeals said Johnson & Johnson had “engaged in conduct that was outrageous because of evil motive or reckless indifference.”

But the appeals court did reduce the verdict amount, which had been $4.7 billion. Johnson & Johnson recently stopped selling its brand of talcum powder in the United States and Canada, but it is continuing to sell the products overseas.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/226772-johnson-amp-johnson-ordered-to-pay-21-billion-for-cancer-causing-baby-powder>

Radio Habana Cuba