

Bolivians buried in mass graves as hospitals collapse amid COVID-19 surge

La Paz, July 10 (RHC)-- In Bolivia, work crews have been digging mass graves for COVID-19 victims in Cochabamba, after a local cemetery stopped accepting victims of the disease. A surge in coronavirus cases has also overwhelmed hospitals in El Alto and La Paz.

Mary Ticona, a nurse who joined a protest of healthcare workers demanding personal protective equipment and coronavirus tests, told reporters: "We collapsed about two months ago. We are attending to our people as we can, on stretchers, in wheelchairs, however we can attend to them. We have collapsed."

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/228153-bolivians-buried-in-mass-graves-as-hospitals-collapse-amid-covid-19-surge>

Radio Habana Cuba