

Google to pay $118 million to employees in gender discrimination suit

Image not found or type unknown

San Francisco, June 13 (HC)-- Google has agreed to pay $118 million to over 15,000 workers to settle a class-action gender discrimination lawsuit.

The lawsuit accused Google of systematically underpaying women in California in violation of state law.

Meanwhile, female employees at the software company Oracle are facing a new setback in their lawsuit against the company. Over the weekend, a judge stripped them of their class-action status.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/290574-google-to-pay-118-million-to-employees-in-gender-discrimination-suit>

Radio Habana Cuba