

Haitian journalist killed by police fire as press faces mounting challenges

Image not found or type unknown

In Haiti, witnesses say journalist Romelo Vilsaint was killed by police fire Sunday after reporters gathered at a police station to demand the release of one of their detained colleagues.

Port-au-Prince, November 1 (RHC)-- In Haiti, witnesses say journalist Romelo Vilsaint was killed by police fire Sunday after reporters gathered at a police station to demand the release of one of their detained colleagues.

Last week, Haiti's largest newspaper Le Nouvelliste said it was suspending publication of its print edition due to "serious security problems" affecting production and distribution.

Last week, Le Nouvelliste reporter Roberson Alphonse survived a shooting attack.

<https://www.radiohc.cu/index.php/en/noticias/internacionales/303658-haitian-journalist-killed-by-police-fire-as-press-faces-mounting-challenges>

Radio Habana Cuba