New York, November 29 (RHC)-- Twitter is expected to reinstate most suspended accounts this week after new owner Elon Musk announced last Thursday a “general amnesty” for previously banned users.

Imran Ahmed, from the group Center for Countering Digital Hate, said: “Superspreaders of hate, abuse and harassment will be the only people to benefit from this latest decision by Twitter.” This comes as a new report found half of Twitter’s top 100 advertisers have left the platform since Musk’s takeover.
