

Cubans Build Hospital in Argentina

Buenos Aires, September 22 (RHC)-- Cuba is currently building in the Argentinean city of Cordoba an eye-treatment hospital to train young doctors as part of a cooperation project with the A Better World is Possible Foundation.

The hospital will be named after Cuban-Argentinean guerrilla fighter Doctor Ernesto Guevara, Telesur TV reported.

Foundation president Claudia Camba, who is responsible for the Cuban medical missions in Argentina, called for donations and efforts to contribute to the bilateral project.

Some 48 thousand Argentines have recovered their sight since 2005, when the free eye-surgery program known as Operation Miracle began to be implemented in the South American nation.

During the first years that a Cuban medical mission worked in Argentina, the patients would travel to Cuba for eye surgery, later they travel to Bolivia, but since 2009 they have been assisted in a small health center in the city of Cordoba, which has administered about 4. 800 surgeries, particularly on cataracts.

Cuba-Argentina collaboration in the education field has benefited over 26,500 citizens who learned how to read and write with the implementation since 2003 in that country of the Yes, I Can Cuban literacy methodology.
