Providence, October 10 (RHC)-- In a blow to the student Palestinian solidarity movement, Brown University in the U.S. voted against divesting from 10 companies that are complicit in Israel's occupation of — and war on — Palestinian territories.

Brown University is a private Ivy League research university located in Providence, Rhode Island.

In a social media post condemning the news, the Brown Divest Coalition warned: "All settler colonial institutions will fail."

Students across the country are marking a Week of Rage with die-ins, walkouts and other actions to protest one year of genocide in Gaza and Israel's escalating war on Lebanon.
