Tel Aviv, June 15 (RHC)-- The number of deaths following the Iranian retaliatory strikes against the Israeli-occupied territories has risen to 15, with more than 385 wounded and 35 missing, the regime's health ministry said.

Israeli emergency services have been carrying out rescue operations since Iran's military operation, while hospitals remain overwhelmed with casualties. Israeli media reports that critical infrastructure and military installations have been damaged during Iran's Operation True Promise III.

The Israeli forces confirmed that Iranian missiles struck various parts of the occupied Palestine. Iran has said advanced medium-range missiles including Badr, Keibar Shekan, and Emad were used against the Israeli regime.

According to the Israeli forces, the situation is still volatile in the occupied territories, as the region is still facing attacks from Iranian missiles.

President of Israel Isaac Herzog says the occupying entity has experienced a "very sad and difficult morning" after the Islamic Republic of Iran's attack against the regime. Herzog "denounced" what he described as "criminal Iranian attacks" on his X account on Sunday and said he would pray for the wounded to recover and for the Israelis who are still missing to be found.

In the early hours of Friday, the Israelis launched a barbaric, and unprovoked assault against Iran, assassinated high-ranking Iranian military commanders and nuclear scientists, and martyred over 70 civilians, including children, and women.

The Tel Aviv regime also carried out large-scale military aggression in multiple locations inside Iran and targeted military infrastructure, nuclear facilities, and residential buildings in Tehran and other cities.

Iran soon launched its retaliatory operation "True Promise III" against the Israeli regime by firing a barrage of missiles toward the occupied Palestinian territories on Friday night.
