

UNASUR Celebrates Simon Bolivar's “Jamaica Letter”

Quito, September 9 (teleSUR-RHC) -- Historians from across the region came together in Quito to celebrate the bicentenary of the “Jamaica Letter” of Simon Bolívar. The letter was present at the event, which highlighted the importance of the document in the history of Latin America. “The Response of a South American to the Americas” was written by Bolívar in 1813. Many leaders of Latin America's recent history have referred to it as the “Jamaica Letter.” “This is the dream of Bolívar, which is the dream of all of us,” said the president of the National Assembly, Diosdado Cabello. The Jamaica Letter, written by Simon Bolívar, is considered one of the most important documents in the history of Latin America.
