

United Nations Criticizes Israel's Illegal Settlement Activities in Occupied Territories

United Nations, November 24 (RHC)-- The United Nations has expressed concerns over Israel's illegal settlement activities, settler violence, and continued destruction of Palestinian homes.

"We continue to witness illegal settlement activities and settler-related violence. Demolitions of Palestinian-owned structures have continued, including punitive demolitions," said UN Deputy Secretary General Jan Eliasson during a special meeting of the UN Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People on Monday.

Speaking on behalf of UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon, Eliasson warned Israeli authorities that the use of excessive force only further angers and frustrates the Palestinians, calling on them to use maximum restraint, especially in relation to lethal force against Palestinians.

"It is abundantly clear that Palestinians feel deep frustration over an occupation that has lasted nearly 50 years," he noted. Eliasson also stressed that security and hope in Gaza and in occupied West Bank, including East Jerusalem, is at a "very low point." He said: "Simply put, the Palestinian people have waited too long."

The Israeli regime routinely orders the demolition of the houses of those Palestinians whom it accuses of being involved in attacks against Israelis. The destruction of Palestinian homes and buildings comes as the Fourth Geneva Convention prohibits an occupying entity from destroying private property or forcibly transferring the region's population.

The demolition of Palestinian homes come hand in hand with Tel Aviv's policy of construction of illegal settlements in the occupied Palestinian territories. Hundreds of thousands of Israelis currently reside in more than 120 illegal settlements constructed since the regime's occupation of the Palestinian territories in 1967. The settlements are considered illegal by most of the international community.
