

First Vice President Miguel Díaz-Canel Heads Cuban Delegation at UN Climate Summit

Havana, November 30 (RHC)-- First Vice President Miguel Díaz-Canel is heading the Cuban delegation at the UN summit on climate change that began sessions Monday in Paris.

At least 150 heads of state and government and high-ranking delegations from 195 countries and the European Union are in Paris, attending the two-week summit.

The Paris climate change talks seek to establish a new binding agreement, limiting global temperature rise to below 2 degrees Celsius, compared to preindustrial levels.
