

Olga Tañón About to Seduce Havana

Renowned Puerto Rican singer, Olga Tañón, is about to seduce Havana with a concert at the anti-imperialist tribune on Saturday, December, 12, at 3 p.m.

Tañón is currently rehearsing for such a performance in the Cuban capital and happily and gratefully remembering the previous concert held last Saturday in Santiago de Cuba's Antonio Maceo Revolution Square.

Her current presentations in Cuba include an overview of her varied repertoire, promoting singles, such as Vivo la Vida, whose video was filmed in Havana, and Tú eres la razón, in which he collaborates with Cuban singers and bands, such as Descemer Bueno and Qva Libre. The concerts are musically directed by renowned Cuban arranger and music producer, Joaquín Betancourt and Angel Hernández.

Considered one of the most versatile singers of Puerto Rico, Olga Tañón is popular in Cuba and her first contact with the Cuban audience was at the Peace without Borders concert held in September, 2009 in Havana's Revolution Square, on which occasion the Puerto Rican singer promised to come back and sing for her Cuban fans on the island.
